

The BIG Climate and Nature Education Survey

Giving students a say on sustainability!

The BIG Climate and Nature Education Survey is an online survey that gives students across whole schools and colleges a chance to have their say on climate change, nature and education.

The survey can be completed by students at from KS2 to KS5 and schools / colleges can take part any time between January and April 2025. Get in touch via research@sos-uk.org with any questions!

Here's how it works...

More about the survey...

What will the survey ask?

The survey will cover a range of topics including:

- Attitudes on and actions for climate change and nature at their school or college, inside and outside the classroom
- Experiences of making change so far, and aspirations for future action in school / college
- General views and experiences linked to climate change and nature

Which students can take part in the survey?

The survey is designed to be completed by KS2 to KS5 students. Students from these year groups can also be involved in the student-led research team.

What are the benefits for schools and colleges?

By taking part in the survey, schools can benefit from:

- An opportunity for a real-world learning experience for students in the research team, gaining skills in project planning, public-speaking and more
- Opportunities to embed sustainability into teaching, e.g. using data in Maths or IT lessons, producing promotional resources in art and design subjects
- A report on student views of climate change and nature to support action taking place on these issues both inside and outside the classroom
- Contributing to a national survey on education, climate change and nature
- Winning prizes to support action on climate and nature in your school / college

What are the options for taking part?

We'd love schools to participate via the route described on the previous page, by supporting a student-led research team but this may not be possible for all schools. You can still take part by asking teachers to share the survey with students in lesson or form time. We're also open to other suggestions so get in touch at research@sos-uk.org!
